

Reportage photography - a special type of photography, combining landscape, portrait, home, and other genres of photography. The main objective reportage photography is to convey the atmosphere of the event, to capture it in the faces, emotions and attitudes. Sequential shooting mode use when covering concerts, cultural events, tragic events, sports games, corporate parties, anniversaries and celebrations.

Photographer should reflect these events properly, that is transfer the right atmosphere, the drama and passions. The audience should be able to see the event through the eyes of a witness and get that experience, together with its participants unique moments.

Feature of reportage photography is that the photographer can not tell its model or group of people how to properly stand up, to obtain a good picture. Reportage photography - it is the seal of a dynamic and rapidly changing events, which allow you to convey a certain idea and create a sense of fairness and objectivity. Do not have time to catch a bright, dynamic moment - and all that it did not return. Especially for a photographer, no one will pose for the second time. Reportage photography - one of the most difficult genres to the photographer, because in addition to technical skills, important skills and experience is very important.

For high-quality reportage photography, you must have fast response and the ability to see certain events through the lens of the camera. Professional intuition and experience are always in the prompt reportage photography, which will happen in the next minute. Because of this he can be pre-prepared for the possibility to capture the most interesting moment. Ordinary photos of participants can be not too bright and too simple where it was held.

Scope of reportage photography today is quite extensive. This is not only the military reports from the "hot spots" of the planet or political coverage, to which we have long been accustomed to. It is also shooting a variety of public events, conferences, presentations, sporting events and children's holidays. Photos should cover the most vivid and climactic moments, creating a coherent and memorable picture.

Thus, reportage photography - is a documentary coverage of events with the help of modern photo opportunities. This is a photo report from the scene to help the viewer to experience the atmosphere of the event and the mood of its participants. To create a good reportage shots the photographer should have a certain sensitivity and insight to action, to be at the right time in the right place.
